Red card for Clinton's » Chichester store could be facing the axe

Don Adams

MANAGING EDITOR
NEWSPAPER HERALD ONLINE

EMPLOYEES at several Chichester-based popular stores face an uncertain future after Clinton Cards went into administration.

Administration at Dole Group said it was "likely that a number of stores will need to be closed" to make the company more viable.

The growing credit crisis has its name of 'you Clinton Cards and Barclays store' employing more than 1,000 full and part-time staff - including those at Chichester and Burgess Road.

Staff at the Chichester branch on East Street have refused to comment on the situation, just not during any question to an administration notice passed to the full bank.

The store was in administration since after

Barclays Bank and Royal Bank of Scotland sold the company's regional loan to the Bank's largest supplier, American Groupings Corporation. "While the bank had received certain conditions for the loan, American Groupings proved for repayments which Clinton Cards could not repay."

"Despite evaluating ways to restructure its business, Clinton's was unfortunately unable to secure adequate support or funding for its restructuring plans."

Administration said the company made losses as a result of a significant store closing. Continued on page 3

Smugglers entertain

THE 2012 Smugglers entertained a full house at the newly-reopened Woodcock Arms on Saturday night. Money raised from the evening has been donated to The Aldebourne Trust, a West Sussex charity supporting adults with learning disabilities.

It was a fabulous evening with music from George Formby, Colin Porter, Jerome Kern and Duke Ellington. The Jazz Smugglers will be performing as part of the English Fairs Festival in May.

The Aldebourne Trust has recently launched a £1million Appeal to raise money to build new facilities and to expand some current ones at the Aldebourne Country Centre. They will be run as Social Enterprises, not only producing an income to support people with learning and/or physical disabilities but also train adults with disabilities so that they can gain the skills to a real life setting in order to become more independent and to apply for future employment opportunities.

Michael McFarley said from the Aldebourne Trust said: "We are really grateful to the Woodcock Arms for hosting a successful evening in aid of our charity. The Jazz Smugglers were brilliant. We would love if people would be interested in supporting us in any way, from small events, to being part of Arts & Chivalry or even coming and volunteering at the Aldebourne Country Centre."

For more information please contact: aldeb@aldebournestrust.co.uk or telephone 01243 544105.

Chichester Children's Poetry Competition

AN AWARD ceremony for a Chichester Children's Poetry Competition has been held by the Rotary Club of Chichester in association with Waterbury's Bookshells, the award ceremony took place at the Chichester Assembly Rooms on Friday 27th April. All the prize winning children attended together with many parents, grandparents, teachers and Rotary Club Members.

Entries to the competition were judged by the well known Author and Poet Stephanie Sargent who leads the MA course in creative writing at Chichester University. Stephanie gave some background to her selection of each of the winning poems and read them individually. The standard of the winning poems this year was very high and they received votes to appreciate from the City strong tradition.

Coordinator Richard Parnham presented the prizes awarded to the winners at the Oriel Rooms, Chichester. There were three prizes in each of three age categories, 5-9 yrs, 10-11 yrs and 12-13 yrs.

• 2012 February this year, children from five Chichester primary schools have been taking part in an exciting new project to encourage and help them to write poetry.

Working with West Sussex County Council, they have all started their own Junior Writers accounts, where each week people bring in pocket money or money they have earned at home doing jobs to save on their own account. The deposits are paid into secure savings accounts with the Credit Union, which the young people can monitor on line.

Children at some of the schools have even presented their own assemblies to tell the other children about the benefits of saving and why the Credit Union is the best place for their money.

The project has been supported by local business, association, High Market, part of The Jingle Soap, Chichester District Council and the England Shop! Money Lending Team's 'Stop Loan Shark' campaign. All were keen to encourage children to understand the importance of good money management and saving for their future.

Chichester Clergy take up challenge

THE DEAR of Chichester Cathedral, joined Chichester Auld and supporters as a role modelling challenge aimed at Chichester Auld Week (11 - 19 May). The task was made more difficult as the participants were given a spoon, a bowl and a jar rather than the traditional using bag. The challenge was staged to highlight the importance of Chichester Auld's work in giving poor communities the right resources and skills to lift themselves out of poverty.

The Very Reverend Nicholas Pugh took part alongside Reverend Derek White (Co-Chair of Chichester Auld) and group along with his wife Anne and Kate Perry (Chichester Auld Regional Coordinator for Sussex) to highlight the work Chichester Auld partners do in giving the right tools to help people in poverty out of poverty.

Reverend Derek White said: "As you can see, describing a cake with a bowl was certainly a challenge. Chichester Auld continues to open our eyes to the huge challenges faced daily by communities around the world. Like us, Sierra Leone where poverty is denying people access to food and education. Through fundraising during Chichester Auld Week here in Chichester, we are ensuring that Chichester Auld partners in Sierra Leone and around the world can continue their inspiring work in equipping communities with the tools they need to help themselves out of poverty."

Chichester Auld Week activities finished last night marking Pentecost week and has been a time between the calendar of many thousands of people each year more than 20 years for the last time as the challenge is to help people through the challenges of poverty around the world.

The focus for Chichester Auld Week this year is the story of a community called Clap in Sierra Leone that has seen remarkable change. Across Sierra Leone, four in every five rural households do not have enough to eat. Chichester Auld partner the Methodist Church of Sierra Leone give money and the tools and skills they need to achieve food security.

They also support communities in setting up Village Development Committees to voice their concerns and lobby the services. Now that they are no longer feared by hunger, the people of Clap have come together and successfully lobbied for a new school and an agricultural work centre for the community. Through the support of Chichester Auld partner the Methodist Church of Sierra Leone, the people of Clap have come together and have taken their future into their own hands.

The Dean said: "Chichester Auld Week offers a chance to get together to put their faith into action. During the week, thousands of volunteers will be taking part in different activities and it would be to give up strong encouragement to all those involved."

Together, we can make a difference!

During Chichester Auld Week volunteers at Chichester and across Sussex will join together with over 100,000 other volunteers around the UK and Ireland as they hit the streets delivering Chichester Auld Week.

volunteers. Others will shake buckets, organise quizes, bake cakes and take part in sponsored walks. All the money raised will go to support the work of Chichester Auld. Chichester Auld Week occurred over the weekend.

Mundham gears up for Summer Gala

ARE YOU wondering how to spend your summer holidays? Then you should enter the Mundham and Detox Flower Show which takes place at the North Meadow Playing Field on Saturday 18th July. The Schedule for this year's Gala and Flower Show has just been published and there are over 10 classes open to enter including flowers, fruit, vegetables, cooking and arts & crafts.

Celia O'Shea, the Show Manager, commented: "The Gala is a big event in the area every year. It is an opportunity for local people to show off their grow produce and their remarkable skills as horticulturists, cooks and the arts, as well as having a fun afternoon enjoying the Gala itself." "We are delighted to offer over 100 trophies for the winners of each class, including 8 for junior entries."

Anyone wishing to enter this year's event needs to refer to the Schedule program available to download from www.norfolkshowing.co.uk, to decide which class they want to enter and register their entry at Mundham Village Hall on Friday 18th July 2012 between 9am and 5pm or send in their entries to the Show Manager.

There is a small fee to enter, which goes towards the cost of the prize money. The Show is run on Royal Horticultural Society rules. Anyone wanting further information can contact Celia O'Shea, the Show Manager, on 01263 911000 or email celia@norfolkshowing.co.uk.

The Flower Show is part of the annual Gala which offers a host of events and stalls to enjoy during the afternoon. There will be a Dog Show, Morris Men, a mass sports day and a variety of refreshments on offer. The judging of the exhibits begins at 10pm.

For more information, please contact Susan Milburn on 01263 911000.

Jubilee celebrations at Chichester Harbour

The Jubilee Boat Race will take place around the harbour on Saturday 18th July.

LIFEBOATS, patrol boats and fishing boats will all be coming together in a celebration of vessels that work in Chichester Harbour. The annual event, Town of Working Boats and Jubilee Sail Past, is open to the public and will take place at Harbour on Wednesday 3 June.

Boats of all shapes and sizes will be lined up alongside the public quay at Harbour. The crews who work the boats will be releasing the public into the harbour for a special day and will be open for two hours from 10am.

Following the show, all the working boats accompanied by leisure boats will sail along the harbour. The Jubilee Boat Race will pass HM Coastguard's 19th Station and Hampshire who will take the Red Boat out on a moored boat. Dressed in red to celebrate the Diamond Jubilee the boats will make a colourful sight as they pass together in a Sail Past.

Sue Cussey, Director of Chichester Harbour Conservancy said: "It's a really exciting day for the event. It will be a big and successful celebration of both the boats and crews that work in Chichester Harbour and the Diamond Jubilee. We are honoured that Her Majesty's Coastguard is participating both on the water and the shore line, will pass us for the event."

The Festival and Sail Past is free of charge and all are welcome to come along. In addition to the boats, there will be displays of nautical art, music, a traditional boat yard, fun children's activities and refreshments.

New Bishop of Chichester appointed

A NEW Bishop of Chichester has been appointed.

Dr Martin Warner succeeds the Rt Rev John Hall, who retired last month. He is currently Suffragan Bishop of Winchester, the Diocese of York.

Dr Warner, 55, studied at St Charles College in Dartford before completing his theological training at St Stephen's House, Oxford. He was ordained deacon in 1984 and priest in 1986 in Easter Cathedral whilst working as Curate of St Peter's Plymouth.

He has previously worked at Lancaster and in churches in Norfolk.

From 1999 to 2004, Dr Warner served as a residentiary Canon of St Paul's Cathedral in London, firstly as Canon Pastor and then as Treasurer where he made a big contribution, particularly with regards to the Cathedral's connection with the art world.

He was elected as suffragan Bishop of Winchester, the Diocese of Bath and Glos and has served the parishes of the Glenside archdeaconry which includes the parishes of Midsizedrough and most of the North Yorkshire Moors.

A spokesperson for the Diocese of Chichester described Dr Warner as a traditionalist who has worked "resolutely to encourage parishes, in which people of all ages can remain together".

He worked closely with women's priest colleagues at St Paul's Cathedral and has sought to work with equal care the ordained men and women in his spiritual jurisdiction in the north of England," the spokesperson said.

Dr Warner said it was a "demanding and exciting challenge" to be the next Bishop of Chichester.

"I look forward very much to learning more about the mission to which we shall be engaging together, though it will be a big reward being the North West as mine," he said.

The Acting Bishop of Chichester, the Rt Rev Mark Swirely, said: "I am delighted that Dr Martin Warner, whom I have known for many years, is to be the new Bishop of Chichester."

"I believe that he will lead us with the effectiveness, energy and clarity that has always been distinctive of his ministry and I very much look forward to working alongside him in the service of the Church and people of Sussex."

The Very Rev Nicholas Pringle, the Dean of Chichester, said: "There are challenging times for the Church and for its bishops. The Dean and Chapter and all at the Cathedral look forward to welcoming Bishop Martin and assure him of our prayers and good wishes as he prepares for his new ministry in Chichester."

However, his appointment has not been welcomed by pro-women bishop group MATON, which said it would remain as a "disappointment" to many in the diocese.

"After a full consultation, many in the diocese were hoping to work with a new bishop who follows normal practice in the Church of England in accepting ordained women as the same house as men," the group said in a statement.

"The message that goes to the wider Church of England is that it still acceptable for women to be seen as a problem that some people feel they need to be protected from rather than a gift to the Church."

"We wonder how the ordained women of Chichester will feel supported with a bishop who does not recognise their ordination. We wonder how the laywomen and men of Chichester will feel among their bishop's priests compromised in this way?"

"At a time when 42 out of 44 Dioceses have voted for women to be made bishops and large numbers in the Church are looking to the day when women will become bishops, the diocese needs to preserve a past that has long gone."

Green light for West Sussex £2.3m Music Hub bid

GOVERNMENT funding of £2.3m over three years has been awarded today (Friday May 4th) to a Music Education Hub in West Sussex. The grant will come from Arts Council England, who are Government and National Lottery cash to promote the arts.

The new Hub is one of a nationwide network of such hubs which have been approved. It follows a bid from West Sussex County Council Music Service, who will be the lead organisation.

The West Sussex Music Education Hub organisation will join together to provide musical education to a number of schools. All children (5-11) in West Sussex will have the chance to sing or learn to play musical instruments.

The news has been welcomed by Peter Griffiths, Cabinet Member for Education and Schools, who described it as a remarkable achievement for West Sussex. He said: "At a time of severe cuts in education, it is a real testament to the hard work of our schools and the music industry."

"It is a great pleasure to work with a range of partners from the private, voluntary and charitable sectors, business and the music industry."

Roger Crocker, Head of West Sussex Music Service, said: "The new Hub will mean we respect working and bring benefits to the whole community. Working with our partners, it will access more activities and resources, and more opportunities. Among those who will benefit will be people with special needs and disabilities and the gifted and talented."

Mark Gidd, MP for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton, who is also the Schools Minister, said the new Hub formed an integral part of his national plan for music education.

He said: "All children, wherever they live, and whatever their circumstances, should have the opportunity to learn a musical instrument and to play and sing with others."

Mark will now begin with the private, voluntary and charitable sectors, as well as the music industry, to shape the way in which the new service will operate.

Do you have what it takes to be a foster carer?

ARE YOU patient, energetic, and with a good sense of humour? If so, have you thought about becoming a foster carer for children and young people?

Foster Care Forthought runs free four days Monday May 14 to Sunday May 20 - West Sussex County Council is using the national campaign to highlight the need for more foster carers to come forward and give security and stability to children in care.

Foster carers come from all walks of life and from a range of cultural and ethnic backgrounds. People from a variety of backgrounds can apply to foster, regardless of their marital status or sexuality.

Fostering can be either short or long-term and can range from just a few days to several years. There are also several types of fostering.

The County Council is looking a fostering drop-in session in Chichester during Foster Care Forthought. The informal drop-in sessions are a chance to talk to members of the fostering team and ask any questions.

The event is taking place from 10am to 5pm on Tuesday May 15, at Chichester Library, Tower Street, Chichester, PO19 4SP.

Cabinet Member for Children and Families Peter Crocker said: "Foster carers give children the chance to develop and flourish as a safe, secure environment."

"He don't just need people to be good parents, we're looking for people who are patient, energetic, with a good sense of humour and who will treat children and young people as individuals."

"It's not to try and place children with foster carers in their local area, so they can continue to stay close to their school, friends, people and places they know."

"It's always on the lookout for new foster carers to come forward. Being a foster carer is very rewarding and it's a chance to help support children and young people in our care."

Foster carers receive a comprehensive support package from the Council, including on-going training and financial allowances to meet the needs of the children and young people in their care.

Drop-in sessions are being held throughout West Sussex this year. For further information visit the website www.westsussex.gov.uk/fostering or call 01243 203333.

Sailing at two great South Coast locations with Lagoon Watersports

LAGOON Watersports, firmly established in Brighton & Hove since the 1970s, has expanded and now offers sailing opportunities in the Solent too.

Now for 2012 Lagoon Watersports has opened at RGA Centre at Gosport Marina, an ideal location for RYA courses, land-based classes and racing at the heart of the Solent. Customers can make use of the facilities at both Brighton Marina and Gosport Marina, and even split courses from Gosport over to Wickham between both locations, allowing them to experience different sailing conditions along the South Coast.

Bob Brown, Co-Director of Lagoon Watersports, commented: "We are very pleased to offer our customers and members an additional location that gives them easy access to the Solent, providing further sailing and training opportunities. We are unique in allowing our clients two great sailing locations along the South Coast, RYA's only Regatta can charter the yacht out of Brighton or in the Solent from Gosport to practice all their skills based on the course, either spending a leisurely day on calm waters, cruising along the coast with family and friends or testing a high performance or high speed boat. Sailing is a very escape, diverse sport opening up destinations and opportunities, and there truly is something for everyone."

A variety of courses are available throughout the year for sailors of all levels, open and children, from RYA practical sailing courses through to shore based theory courses and packages like 'Sail to Europe'.

Access to make sailing easy and accessible for everyone, Lagoon Watersports offers a great value Unlimited Coastal Hire membership option with benefits including unlimited hire of 10m and 12m boats and 10m and 12m boats at Brighton Marina, access to high performance yachts and Powerboats, discounted charter rates at Brighton and Gosport Marina as well as weekly racing events and training classes. Being able to take family and friends out and the use of all the facilities at both Brighton and Gosport Marina without having to worry about mooring or keeping your boat maintained are further reasons to become a member. Prices for the Unlimited Coastal Hire membership are £100 for a year or £10 per month.

If you are an occasional sailor and want to have a great other water sports too including windsurfing, kitesurfing, stand up paddle boarding and tubing then you can upgrade to the Lagoon Pro Club membership which also gives you access to three other Lagoon sites. Prices for the Lagoon Pro Club membership start from £750 for a year or £75 per month, with single, bulk, student and OAP prices available for all memberships.

The smart money is still on solar

THE GOVERNMENT has recently slashed solar subsidies, meaning households are less likely to commit to solar power. This has made buying conditions tough for local installers of solar panels, however, one Chichester business is fighting back.

Matthew Pearce, director of South Coast Renewable before its head office here, has been putting people off suddenly. "I can't stress much less to install solar panels compared to a year ago. There have been a lot of glowing headlines about solar power but the subsidies are far better than anything you could get in the bank. And by investing in solar power, not only do households protect themselves from rocketing electricity bills, they help local businesses and employment as well as the environment."

Matthew believes households can make great returns on solar power. "The savings are getting through because people think the government has stopped giving subsidies that's not the case. The subsidies have been reduced, but the sort of the technology has come down enough for us to reduce prices by up to 20 per cent, so solar power is a great investment."

The Solar Trade Association estimates that solar power offers up to a 100 return on investment today. Household installing solar panels get a feed tariff from the government for the power they 'sell back' to the grid. Although the tariff has reduced, considerations from here too. "You're, the independent companies but others," he adds, "the tariff for an average household now is still a really attractive proposition."

Matthew believes the public's perception of solar panels has been changed over the last four months with the tariff cut and the way the government has handled the situation. "But in despite the financial returns were being cut since as they were last year. For example, last summer there was a 50p benefit per year for a 4000 watt panel of 1000w. Now there's a 40p benefit per year for a 4000 watt panel of 1000w - so you could make your investment back in just eight years. Once a household has signed up to the Feed-In-Tariff, their rate is guaranteed, twice for life.

Matthew Pearce, South Coast Renewable

years. It's a really good investment in your house but people who would usually take advantage don't realise just how attractive it is."

The environmental campaign group Greenpeace is keen to encourage people to invest in solar. In Dorset Park, Policy Director at Greenpeace UK explains why.

"Local renewable energy means a reliable contribution to a sustainable economy. It's welcome further solar PV systems, taking advantage of previously renewable energy in the drive to protect the planet from climate change."

Vernon Graham, Chief Executive of the EPC, quality assurance scheme said: "It is true that solar power still offers very attractive returns to households at current rates."

There have been over a quarter of a million installations across the UK since the launch of the Feed-In-Tariff in April 2009. The industry has blossomed to employ around 25,000 people and it must to grow rapidly despite the recession.

PMN looking forward to a good wedding season

PMN Wedding Fayres Ltd are looking forward to the spring and summer wedding season with one of the biggest wedding fayres of the year at the stunning Old Thomas Manor Hotel Golf & Country Club near Liphrook, Hampshire, this Sunday 10th May 2012.

They have a list of the very best wedding suppliers exhibiting over the ground floor of the historic manor, as well as the Grand Ballroom, the Terrace Bar and the Hampshire Suite. American Pie: Reunion (15)

THREE out of five stars

Running time: 102 mins

Director: Jon Hurwitz, Hayden Schlossberg

Starring: Jason Biggs, Alyson Hannigan, Chris Klein, Thomas Ian Nicholas, Tara Reid, Susan W. Adams, Scott, Mena Suvari

Watchable sequel that gets by on strong comic performances and the audience's adult attention for its likable classiness, but is also fairly light on laughs overall and there are several missed opportunity

What's it all about?

Directed by Jon Hurwitz and Hayden Schlossberg (from the Harold & Kumar movies), American Pie: Reunion revisits the main cast of the story but for those, as, high school reunion and finds each of them living their own problems. As you see, Jim (Jason Biggs) has a two year old son with Michelle (Alyson Hannigan), who is taking a job on their son's life. Or (Chris Klein) as a movie TV celebrity whose numerous supermodel wife (Katie Couric) can't make it when he runs into his old high school girlfriend Heather (Mena Suvari) (Klein (Thomas Ian Nicholas) is a happily married man who's concerned about seeing his first love Vicky (Tara Reid) again. Paul (Klein Ray Thomas) revisits the gang with tales of travelling the world and Vicky for Michelle's friend Shaina (Susan Adams) and Stefan (Susan Williams Scott). Jason's really changed at all. Or has he?

The Good

There's a huge amount of adult attention for these characters and the performances are as good as you'd expect (with the exception of Tara Reid, who looks pitiful throughout), though the majority of the cast get side-lined in favour of Jim and Stefan. That said, Scott actually manages to score better with a host of depth that turns round as he becomes gradually realises that every person also has secrets on. There's also terrific support from Eugene Levy and Jennifer Coolidge as Jim's dad and Stefan's mom, who get their own all-time best roles.

The vets and Schlossberg deliver a handful of laugh-out-loud moments (including an improved version of would be charlie to spoil her) and ensure that there's plenty of gross out gags and nudity (much of it R-rated), though it's also fair to say that the main comic set pieces are largely first-grained and the film slows to a not very funny crawl in the second half.

The Bad

The cast film dating-pushed and bygone, if not aged, fans of last night's weight room female characters, whereas here, Reid, Simon and Hannigan don't even get a scene together, while other returning female characters (Shaina, Elizabeth a Hadu, Patricia Lyndon James) are reduced to walk-on scenes. Similarly, the script wastes several screening opportunities (particularly with regards to Levy and Coolidge) and some really gets to grips with the new focus, while others play (such as the first gang that come after them) get randomly dropped for no reason.

Worth seeing?

American Pie: Reunion scrapes a pass thanks to some likable characters and strong comic performances, but the script is sluggish and isn't as out there as funny as it should have been.

McDonald's Launch Kid-Friendly 'Five-A-Day Drink', containing 12 spoonfuls of sugar

AFRONTIER has promised children one of their five-a-day portions of fruit and vegetables will give them 100 calories from next week.

New drink 'Fruit & Veg' will be served at the counter from May 10, alongside other soft drink staples, in response to research by the company that found children found that 'more exciting and desirable'.

As part of the fast food giant's efforts to promote the health benefits of its children's menu, the drink contains no added sugar, artificial colours or flavours and blends 100% fruit juice from grapes, apples and raspberries with natural sparkling water.

McDonald's said the drink contains no added sugars, artificial colours or flavours and blends 100% fruit juice from grapes, apples and raspberries with natural sparkling water, giving one of the five-a-day portion.

However, a large number of reports continue to suggest that sugar, equivalent to 12 spoonfuls of sugar, is linked to increased weight gain in children more than 10 years old. The drink also contains no caffeine.

Sainsbury's tops retailers with industry-leading Sustainability Score

SAINSBURY'S has been awarded the top spot in the retail sector for its ambitious work on sustainability by the FTSE4Good Index.

The award, the independent, highly regarded index evaluates participating businesses from around the globe against key social, environmental and governance practices. Sainsbury's achieved an overall score of 4.4 out of five, against a global average average of around 3.4, making it not only a leader in its sector but in the top five of all the businesses rated.

The retailer also scored a five for its work on climate change, which is considered 'best practice' in the sector.

Simon Wright, Head of Corporate Responsibility at Sainsbury's, said: "Last year we set out ambitious sustainability commitments to our 20 by 20 sustainability plan. This accolade is a great endorsement of that progress we're already making."

Sainsbury's published its 20 by 20 Sustainability Plan in October 2010. The industry-leading plan is built into Sainsbury's business strategy and sets out commitments to be achieved by 2020.

The commitment to address key areas of focus:

Sustainable and Healthy Products - including Fair for Britain. By 2020, we'll double the amount of British food we sell.

Environment - including operational carbon emissions reduction. By 2020, we'll have reduced our operational carbon emissions by 30 per cent (absolute) and 50 per cent (relative, compared with peers).

Customers - including no palm oil. By 2020, 100 per cent of our customers will have received no palm oil from Sainsbury's.

Communities - including new jobs and skills. By 2020, we'll create 50,000 new jobs in the UK.

Sainsbury's goal is to be a leader in sustainability and ethics. The company has transformed the market for Fairtrade products, becoming the world's largest Fairtrade retailer. It is also the largest retailer of MSC certified fish and BSCI certified poultry. Sainsbury's also has a long track record of pursuing ethical theory and leadership strategies, and championing community involvement, not least through its support for Comic Relief and the Parkinson's Society.

Sainsbury's include using carbon saving technologies for new and existing sites that will drive down energy usage, thereby reducing energy costs. There is also a growing focus on providing customers with more fresh food as the company works to double the amount it currently sells.

How families can save £50 a month by reducing food wastage

EACH YEAR in the UK we throw away a staggering 7.5 million tons of food and drink from our homes - and more than half of this could have been eaten. This is equivalent to 600 million pounds of food yearly, or £600 million.

If we use waste management food as WRAP has put together loads of handy tips on reducing food wastage as part of their Love Food Hate Waste campaign.

You'll find tips on how to store food properly, how to control portion sizes so you don't overeat, how to buy long-lasting ingredients and how to turn leftovers into tasty dishes.

There are also tips on how to change your shopping habits to make a big difference. These tips should help you avoid wasting food.

Not only will you save money, you'll also be doing the environment a favour - if we all stopped wasting food the benefit would be the equivalent of taking one in five cars off the road.

There's loads more information and advice on the Love Food Hate Waste website.

PruHealth reveals Brits are eating less healthily due to rising living costs

PRUHEALTH has announced that, according to its most recent study, every year on five (one in five) is eating less healthily due to the rising cost of living.

With the UK dipping back into recession, and food inflation on the rise, new data from PruHealth, the health insurance provider that researches healthy behaviour, finds the cost of living is a real issue. It says that one in five (one in five) is eating less healthily than they would like to and over half (56 per cent) believe their health has suffered as a result of the recession.

The study, which ran at the start of the financial downturn in 2008 and again this year, highlights the impact a health is making harder as the downturn in terms of rising living costs.

Over the last four years 95 per cent of Brits have changed their eating and shopping habits and 10 per cent of those that have not, or are not doing so as much as they should.

The five-day average score of the most health professionals and health companies, but the number of Brits struggling to reach the recommended target has increased by 10 per cent. This (10 per cent) shows that they are currently doing it is a challenge compared to 2008 at the start of the recession on cost.

More than two-thirds (68 per cent) of Brits say healthier foods tend to be more expensive. One in five (20 per cent) respondents said they're buying as much as they can that is reduced to eat and one in five (20 per cent) only buy foods that are on special offer. Therefore, around one in five (20 per cent) have said they regularly take extra supplements because they are unable to eat as healthily as they like or to supplement their diet.

HealthyPruHealth parents want to put their children's health first and ensure they have a nutritionally balanced diet. But, almost one in five (20 per cent) are doing that at the expense of their own health. One in five (20 per cent) are even skipping meals so their children eat well.

Dr David Richards, Head of Clinical Research at PruHealth, commented: "We can clearly see how people's health is being affected by how their affected, with the picture having been significantly more than the start of the recession downturn. People are only too well aware of the need to eat healthily, but financial constraints are making it difficult, resulting in people's health being negatively affected."

Prada. The exhibit follows a star-studded opening gala on Monday that saw Hollywood stars, top models, sporting champagne and the extremely healthy kick to the Met's Art Costume Institute.

Dresses of immense value created by the two designers will be on show until August in a space a backdrop of temporary fixed installations featuring the actual Prada and an archive, July 2013, is the role of Schiaparelli, who died in 1953.

In reality the two fashion icons never had a chance to meet, but for the exhibition they are engaged dressing their love and career. Both known as strong characters, their dialogue includes disagreements, notably over whether or not fashion is art.

"Five years ago we had received the Schiaparelli material and we wanted to see it," Mariella Costa, the head curator, said.

"As Schiaparelli was already the muse for the show of the 1980s season, we just needed to find another designer. The first name we selected was Prada. Prada was not only her influence and her engagement as the art scene, but also the fact that she was Italian and we thought having that common thing made it more elegant and symmetrical.

Last year, the Met hosted a big retrospective of Italian designer Alexander McQueen's work.

Next Olympic Formalwear

AS YOU LIKE TWO DESIGNERS? Your talented design team has channelled its creative force and expertise into one more formalwear look for all the athletes of Team GB and ParalympicsGB to represent official countries during the London 2012 Games.

The winning results, rendered in navy with elegant touches of gold, combine the elegance of late-contemporary tailoring with the comfort and ease of performance sportswear.

Every garment showcases distinctive detailing, which's perfect, fashioned from a premium quality merino wool cloth, are styled with slender peak lapels and double angle-lapels for a truly ergonomic fit. Lightweight knit fabric interlinings ensure these precise athletes will keep their cool even when the going gets hot.

The iconic underwire of each jacket collar is reinterpreted with the team motto - Better Never Stops for Olympics, and Talent, Praise, Determination for Paralympics.

The race against time is also reflected in the look of the winning week-end dress that elegantly carries the women's pole.

Our iconic national flag is also interpreted for athletes later out destination on the look of the winning week-end dress that elegantly carries the women's pole.

a wonderful find. Her skills and talent. Both men have sportsman's winning attitude at the work - and the team has recently received on the field.

Three distinctive formalwear options, designed with equal attention to creativity and elegance, aim to set our finest athletes apart. Combining thoroughly contemporary elegance and functional practicality, they provide visually outstanding looks for the extraordinary men and women of our greatest-ever team. Definitely, the pride of GB.

Evans; A cut above the curve

SPRING is about to be an exciting season, with the launch of another groundbreaking collaboration by leading glass ace David Evans. One of Britain's most influential fashion talents, Clemente Ribeiro, have designed an and more collection that reflects their unique points and design.

It was the first time high and low in the high street for the navy woman and David Ribeiro and Clemente Ribeiro feel that this market is still largely neglected by luxury fashion. They are generally proud of using their talent and skills and see their commitment as a long-term project and a learning process.

Commenting on the exciting collaboration, Clemente Ribeiro said: "For our first range we addressed the different body shapes, with styles which are accessible but modern, with an emphasis on prints and femininity. It was our starting point, understanding different proportions and different needs, but I know for fashion that is our different from the high fashion consumer. For him being elegant or glamorous, we addressed curves and voluptuousness."

Shot by leading fashion photographer Angelo Pavesi and styled by Vanessa Young, the Clemente Ribeiro for Evans 'Sweet' collection comprises of a broad range of wearable pieces that have a strong eye-catching influence. It will be available from a new 14-20 and incorporate signature floral prints, alongside technical brocade angles and silk fabrics, all set against a varied colour palette.

After the extensive research Evans did into body shapes, it was apparent that large designs that supported them to help streamline the figure. There are great angles and soft lines shapes for those that are 'Busty' or 'Apple', featuring separate for a 'Hour' and 'pearl' design as dresses for an 'Hourglass'.

Brand Director Paula Rose said: "We feel there is a space for a modern British designer in the plus-size arena and Clemente Ribeiro are keen to develop the brand customer with product designs that are original and fashion relevant."

"With prices starting from Taylor's beautiful, arrow print silk, set at a more elegant one day into late evening wear, signature collection from Clemente Ribeiro.

Transform your life with sensory living!

SOMETIMES we associate being content with health to eating lots of money, time and effort. There are two very special and simple things you can do to improve the quality of your life almost instantly!

First - Start high pitched audiotape played around someone's stress levels and decreases our anxiety. From General to Broadway, classical, postmodern, stimulating compositions have been shown to promote positive states of mind and overall health. Passtive sounds automatically relax the nervous system, balancing our bodies, minds, emotions and spirits both individually and collectively. Listen to the sounds that surround you. There can be many things, for example, in nature when walking, or a baby's giggle, your beloved pet, or your child's voice. Live in the moment and pay attention to what's around you.

Right - Start doing soundscapes from the spirit. It's a fact that the use of sound, vibration, frequency and resonance describes everything possible with positive, attractive, mental things, whether natural, artificial or technical will make a massive difference to how you feel. Know what colours make you feel good, or what pattern, painting, artwork or beauty line you prefer. If you don't know, experiment and see. Change a wall colour, or the colour of your front door! The light that enters your eye stimulates brain chemistry and plays a big part in your emotional moods by generating balance and harmony. Negative visual stimulation causes the opposite response by increasing stress, anxiety and negative moods. There's what we see affects who we are and how we respond to life, it's important that we know we have choice. So why not provide our minds to experience that which comes with positive visual input that reflect a positive world. It's a good idea to be conscious and achieve an everything that you see. Your family, your house, your car, your food, your work, your life. You will find that you start reacting great rewards! So why not make these changes to benefit your life!

News Flash! Finally we have our own date for any of you that are interested in the Spanish Beat Camp! It is starting on Monday our May for 14 days and is going to be a wonderful look starting your new sensory body shape and weight! Not only that, we have devised the diet plan as it gives you a guide-line and more energy than you could imagine, but we also give you very informed information to take away with you to keep you motivated once you get back home to your natural routine. The price for the first week is going to be less than half! It's a total bargain! There are only 5 spaces available as it really is first come first served. From this onwards as back to full price and well run every 14 days throughout the summer. There are special weeks where I will be there doing the Ayurvedic testing in all participants, giving you an incredible insight to where you are with your health and how you can improve things. All the details can be found on the website below. The sites are beautiful, the trainers are excellent, and every meal will be served to you as basically if you have been a member or on possibly for one whole week. What a fantastic opportunity. Eye treatment 'could save NHS £84m'

THIS NHS could save more than £84 million a year if it avoided treatment for a common eye condition to a cheaper drug and screen cancer, study authors have claimed.

One of the largest trials carried out in the field of eye disease in the UK has shown similar effectiveness in treating wet age-related macular degeneration (AMD) when using either Lucentis, licensed for treating wet AMD, or Avastin, currently licensed for cancer treatment, research has found.

Scientists and eye specialists at 75 hospitals and UK universities analysed the results from a trial, named DRON, involving 600 people with wet AMD.

The study authors said the findings indicated that the NHS in the UK could save £84.5 million a year, based on stopping 20,000 people each year, by switching from Lucentis to Avastin, and administering the treatment on an "as needed" basis.

Professor Usha Chakraborty of Queen's University Belfast, centre for vision and vascular research, who led the research study team, said: "The trial results at the end of the first year show that Lucentis and Avastin have similar effectiveness."

"Superiority of the drug treatment, or treating monthly vs as needed, sight in the affected eye improved by between one and two letters on a standard eye test."

Yet AMD affects about one of all people with AMD, a common eye condition among people aged 50 and older and a leading cause of blindness in older adults.

Currently Avastin is licensed for use in treating five different types of cancer, including cancer of the breast and bowel, but not for wet AMD.

Food for thought; Spring foraging

Expert advice on what nature has to offer the dinner table during the spring months from Jo Goleworthy

There are so many amazing plants waiting to be harvested to fill our dining table with beautiful treats. Take a stroll through the woods, a meander along the river or an afternoon walk along the beach and you can find a plethora of wild food just waiting to be eaten.

“Edible ground elder could be the answer to someone’s weed problems!”

Look out for young nettle shoots. The paler stem is as delicious as fresh ones until the end of autumn but the young green shoots are delicious as soups and teas. If you without saying that you should pick with gloves as. Once cooked they have a similar taste to spinach and are full of vitamins. Young dandelion and dock leaves pulled before the flowers emerge make a fantastic addition to soups. Every part of the dandelion is edible. Even considered dandelion greens as your salad? It grows along damp grassy beds close to rivers and canals. It has a fabulous licorice flavour that adds a real punch a baby but not. Bright shiny ground elder leaves are edible. You can cook them into soups and soups but not to be eaten raw. This could be the answer to someone’s weed problems. Hedge garlic is an excellent resource in our homes. It starts with a narrow leaf flower and grows through to a strong garlic scent. The leaves are identifiable by their distinctive spiky looking leaves, although completely soft to the touch. Sea lettuce, or wild spinach is a great accompaniment to sea roasts fish dishes. It can be found along the Thames coast line and delivers a fabulous earthy flavour. The leaves are found in clumps and look similar to spinach, but with a texture slightly more leaf. Remember to not be greedy when foraging, only take what you need. Make everything thoroughly before using and when possible wash, poach or steam before cooking. The one thing foraging rules is if you’re not sure, don’t eat it. Take care back where possible. I recommend ‘Food for Free’ by Richard Mabey. UK's faltering economy causes Brits to neglect their homes

A LARGE PERCENTAGE of Brits are neglecting to carry out DIY projects, from painting to household repairs, as an all time low.

Lloyds TSB have released research that shows spending on DIY has declined to an all time low, as figures reveal spending at its lowest since records began over 25 years ago. Research for Lloyds TSB expenditure on DIY has begun to grow. The peak in household spending for DIY was in 2007 when £4.5 billion went towards home improvements, but since then the figure stands by just over half to £2.1 billion. This equates to a DIY budget of roughly £100 per household.

Commenting on the plight faced by UK consumers, James Thorne, Lloyds TSB Housing Economist, said:

"Consumers have been experiencing the biggest squeeze on their discretionary income for over a year. Couple that with a very subdued housing market, and it is unsurprising that so many are cutting back on home improvements. With consumer confidence expected to remain challenging, the current squeeze on spending on both DIY and home loans is likely to continue for some time yet."

Purchasers of DIY tools saw a significant decline with spending in this area falling from £1.3 billion to £1.1 billion between 2008 and 2011.

Between 2008 and 2011, the number of household employing tradesmen reduced by 4%

It is the overall spending on home maintenance, including DIY and tradesmen services, dropped by 10% to £1.1 billion. This is compared to a figure of £1.2 billion in 2008.

While many consumers are experiencing a squeeze on household budgets, there are a number of ways to make sure you have the best place when finances are tight.

There are a number of rewarding bank accounts. This is a great way to save you can now effectively to ensure you, rewards the market to see what bank account will offer you the most suitable benefits for your financial requirements.

Rise in supply takes the edge off used car prices

INCREASED SUPPLY of used cars has taken the edge off used car prices in the trade, according to CAP.

A quote more of the pressure has been for dealers who were frustrated over the level of competition for trade stock forcing prices up during the early part of the year.

At the heart of the change is a market confidence has been the return of performance cars from dealers due to the March price drops. With these dealers now focused on reducing their performance, competition to anyone think in the open market has reduced and that has led to a slight widening of value.

Despite the increase in supply, CAP believes the medium term stability of the used car market is not threatened.

CAP's Mike Hand said: "A year ago the market in volume was much more of a cause for concern because it was largely driven by dealer self-regulation. That was due to a number of reasons in the new car market, and it wasn't a market and large volume of late plate cars into the market."

"The time scale of the market, new car sales represented previous business and the fact that there are around 500,000 new cars a month sold, so it's not a market as a year ago in evidence for that."

"The dip in the trade market has clearly reflected from that of a few weeks ago."

where franchise and independent dealers were competing hard for every quality used car and consequently forcing it difficult to maintain satisfactory profit per car. Now the heat is off we are hearing reports that margins are improving for many. Although franchise dealers have not completed prices up, buying in the open market now had finally managed to fill all their long-standing forward space by the end of April.

"Franchise dealers are also realigning their used car profiles to focus back into younger cars, which has led to a widening of a gap of a 10-year old cars, offering much more choice in the marketplace for independents. The car supermarketers are very active in the trade market and some are buying quite aggressively for the purpose of the best cars for retail. We have seen some dealerships more buyers than usual at sales, but having with fewer purchases, because they are ensuring they don't miss any opportunities to cherry-pick the best vehicles."

"Despite the general increase in volume, the fact that the majority of dealers tell us that their retail business is ranging from satisfactory to strong means we believe the medium term stability of market prices is not a major concern."

Peugeot 208 R2 Rally Car

TO FOLLOW on and build on the successful achievements with the sublimar 208, 208, 208 Peugeot has applied its expertise, utilising the spirit of re-generation that continues all of their best features to produce the Peugeot 208.

Peugeot Sport remains the first of three roll-overed competition cars, as the performance begins to go on sale across Europe.

The first competition version revealed in the 208 R2 which will be designated as a 'version on the road' Tour de Corse as the basis of the Peugeot 208 R2 and Peugeot 208 R2.

Development of the competition version of the Peugeot 208 has been an operation since the car was announced in 2004, and the first version to be released in the R2 which will provide a glimpse of its potential at next month's Tour de Corse (May 10-12) in France. The 208 R2 motor sport derivatives of the car will be the light of day before the end of 2012, beginning with the current version which features a specification very similar to that of the R2. The current version will be followed by the newly-ordered 208 R2 which will go on to take over from the current 208 R2 competition car at the end of the year.

national and international level. It is due to be unveiled in September.

"With the 208, Peugeot has given itself the means to create a new winning car," said Peugeot's Rally Director Laurent Eschard at the model's launch. "The 208 R2 comes over the successful spirit of the 208 and the 208, plus the functionality of the 208's thoroughly modern package," added Xavier Peugeot, the 208's Product Director. Through the lens of the R2, Peugeot's experts have sought to mark the launch of the rally competition line-up by highlighting the model's technical appeal and immediately visible line.

The 208 R2 will appear in the rally where it starts at 'end of the road' with a Tour de Corse (May 10-12), the fourth round of the 2012 International Rally Challenge. Peugeot Sport driver Stéphane Lemerle and co-driver Benjamin Veiller will drive the car both ahead of the field at the French event before staying on in Corsica for a week of testing after the rally.

National report highlights University's Olympic expertise

THE UNIVERSITY of Chichester's contribution to this summer's Olympic and Paralympic Games has been acknowledged in a national report endorsed by Sir Coe.

The 'Next Generation' initiative has a well-established Olympic heritage dating back to the 1988 Seoul Games, and continues to be involved in the training and preparation of Olympic athletes ahead of London 2012.

The report - 'Olympic and Paralympic Games: The impact of universities - looks at universities, the Olympic Games and sport. It showcases the diverse contribution that higher education is making to the next Games across numerous areas.

It was commissioned to mark Universities Week, which aims to increase public awareness of the role and raised role of the UK's universities. It is the University's role in the Next Games Partnership for the next Games is highlighted. The group will welcome visits from Sir Sebastian Coe, the UK's Olympic and Paralympic Games, the University, Denmark and Poland to the country for their pre-Games training camp. Through the partnership, the team will be able to access sports science support from the University.

The report also highlights one report based at the University who has used his expertise to support Olympic and Paralympic athletes (Sports physician Dr Marcus Smith attended the Seoul and Barcelona Olympic Games as part of the Great Britain rowing team and subsequently played a central role in the preparation of summer teams for the Atlanta, Sydney and Athens Olympic Games.

Professor Clive Hoyle, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Chichester, said: "I have been delighted that our expertise is now being recognised, this report only tells part of our story."

"Every GB sailing medal winner for the past four Olympic Games has undertaken part of their training here, and we continue to prepare sailors for London 2012 through work funded by the RYA. All of the regional coaches to Chichester for regular course assessments and general sports science support."

"We are also going to be offering our own of our own the summer. This Quarter we currently employ for his expertise in Sport and Exercise Physiology. He is also a double world judo champion and is the number one seed going into the Paralympic Games in his class."

Sir Coe, LONDON Chair, said: "I am delighted to be supporting Universities Week, which is celebrating the Higher Education sector's engagement with the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. Universities have been essential to London 2012, through the provision of expertise, facilities, volunteers and many of those 120 and Paralympic athletes' potential medal hopefuls."
